

Benefit for

Abby Olson

Granddaughter of Gene & Kathy Stobbs

Abby was only 8 when she was diagnosed in September of 2012 with Acute Myeloid Leukemia. She completed her first treatments in March of 2013. Abby relapsed and started treatment again in September of 2013.

AML is a type of leukemia that is usually found in adults and it is rare for people under 40. AML is a cancer of the blood and bone marrow – the spongy tissue inside bones where blood cells are made. Acute means that it is a rapidly progressing cancer.
